

The Daily Union Vedette.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, MARCH 23, 1865

[Editorial correspondence.]

Fort Bridger, March 20th, 1865.

En Route.

Traveling can scarcely be considered a pleasure at this season of the year; at least, we are entirely satisfied of the fact without a wish for further demonstrations, quite content with our recent experience in journeying hither from Camp Douglas.

The eastward-bound coach called for us about three o'clock in the afternoon, on the day of our departure and, having secured our tickets, the price of which had advanced, in consequence probably, as the Major suggested, of the depreciation of gold, we took our seats and rolled out of Camp southward, intending to strike the stage road, near the mouth of Parley's Cañon. In this we were doomed to disappointment, for scarce a quarter of a mile had been passed, when suddenly the bottom of the road fell out and the coach with its occupants, dropped through a huge drift into a cavern tunneled by a small sized river underneath the snow.

Having extricated ourselves from this difficulty and taken an account of damages, it was found necessary to make a detour to town for repairs. After winding through more streets than we thought existed therein for nearly three mortal hours, much to the disgust of the Major, on whose mind sundry packages of greenbacks rested very heavily, and whose confidence in human nature is not as perfect as could be wished, we finally got out of the city, without further accident, about sunset, and went on our way rejoicing—very mildly.

About three miles up the canyon we exchanged the coach for a sleigh, in which we spread our blankets and robes and prepared to make ourselves as comfortable as possible under them and the circumstances. The night passed away without interruption and early on the following morning we broke our fast at Weber. From the "Head of Echo" our troubles began with the deep snows, that cover those summits and which, being in a melting mood, had sunk away from the road on either side and gave our sleigh an almost unconquerable tendency to upset, much to the discomfort of at least three of our party, the major portion of which had himself safely tied up in a bag for protection against the cold, and to be in ambush ready for an attack of robbers, which was momentarily expected by him. As the road followed the mountain side a considerable portion of the way, had a genuine turnover occurred, in his helpless condition he must have "gone from our gaze like a beautiful dream," not exactly, but nothing could have saved him from an impromptu excursion of a mile or more down the mountain into the ravine below. To prevent such a catastrophe we were compelled to "trim ship" continually, and thereby allowed Charley, whose normal condition is that of sleep, who sleeps always except at meal time, to slumber composedly through the entire performance. In imitation of him our team, evidently well used to the dangers of these vast drifts, whenever the footing became insecure would scatter itself promiscuously around over the snow, each separate steed lying down in perfect contentment until unharnessed and, by dint of much lifting and sundry kicks and cures, compelled to assume an upright position and tread the, not straight, but narrow path that led to our destination.

Continuing this process of working our passage we finally reached Bear River before dark, where, having eaten a meal which cost two dollars but was worth less, we again piled into the sleigh with the comforting assurance from our driver, that, if we did not get stranded in Sulphur Creek, some distance ahead, our troubles were nearly over. This proviso proved to have been wisely made, for, when that delectable locality was reached, the horses went through the rotten ice in terrible confusion, but struggled out on the opposite bank, in which feat we were not so fortunate. One runner took the upper side of the ice and the other went underneath, turning the sleigh up at an angle of forty-five degrees, in which situation we were left by the breaking of the double-tree. And there we lay, for three awful hours, while the driver went back to the station, some three miles, to procure a new outfit. When we took our plunge, the Major, without waiting to let the Bull out of the bag, jumped overboard, but the treacherous ice gave way and down he went into the cool depths of Sulphur Creek not quite up to his neck.

We heard some very strong language used on that occasion, and there was a passable smell of brimstone round about, but whether arising from the water or the Major's wrath, we could not determine. Having warmed himself by this means, he lay down in the sleigh, Charley following suit, with our unhappy self sandwiched between them. "The wind blowed as twould blow its last," the snow fell as it never fell before, but Charley smuggled down on top of us and, with his legs dangling into the water up to his knees—fell asleep—snoring in sweet unconsciousness of misery, that made our own perfect for want of company. Sometime in the night, the driver came back and fished us out of that infernal stream, and the next recollection we have is of awaking on the following morning, just at daybreak, and finding ourselves in Bridger, where our frozen vitals were thawed by a glass of excellent brandy, for which and other mercies we here take pleasure in declaring ourselves duly thankful.

THE INDIANS ON THE WAR PATH.

Ev-rything in the shape of news that comes to us from the remote interior, points to a general Indian war as inevitable. Only an unusually severe and protracted winter has restrained the outbreak of hostilities at different sections along the route; but meanwhile the Indians have not been idle. They have kept up a continual and intimate correspondence with each other throughout the Territories, their communications extending over a line of some thousands of miles, and including nearly if not quite all the tribes with which we have been at peace. General Connor, who has proved a most efficient officer, allowing nothing to interfere with his resolutions, and disdaining all considerations of personal comfort where his duty is involved, has been for some weeks traversing the country between the threatened points by easy stages, and has acquired by this time a knowledge of the enemy's plans which will be of material assistance to his little army of the interior during the coming season. The prospect is that if red-tape, in the shape of speculating quartermasters, does not interfere, the ensuing summer will put an end to the uprising. A decided blow must be struck before the foe can concentrate his forces, that order and confidence may be restored among the settlers.—S. F. Flag.

Mrs. Partington says the doctor tells her she has two buckles on her lungs, and she really believes it to be true, for she feels the prong every breath she draws.

AN ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE.

BY A RESIDENT OF UTAH.

ARTICLE 7.

It were unjust, however, to Mr. Carington, to attach to him the entire blame for the disloyalty expressed in his farcical editorial. He was but the accomplished actor—his master the author of the farce. All that is expressed or implied of disloyalty to the government, and opposition to the administration of its laws, has been expressed and implied in the coarser and less forcible language of Brigham Young. The following quotations from "Remarks by President Brigham Young, Feb. 24th, 1856," will amply illustrate the truth of this statement:

"I tell you that the time of one hundred and fifty men for six days, will not supply the loss to this community which has been incurred to satisfy the lustful, wicked, cursed, hellish appetites of professed brethren in striving to cheat their neighbors, by employing lawyers to deceive, or lie for them, which are synonymous terms in the eyes of justice, and by bringing in witnesses to screen the guilty and deceive a jury, whereby they are liable to give a wrong verdict."

"The juries are liable to be deceived where there is so much darkness, and the whole posse will go to hell, and I say it in the name of Jesus Christ. You men who follow after such a course of things as I refer to, I would not give the ashes of a rye straw for the whole of you, jurymen, witnesses, and every other person who countenance such a place. It is a cage of unclean birds, a den and a kitchen of the devil prepared for hell, and I am going to warn you of it."

"Men who love corruption, contention and breils, and who seek to make them, I curse you in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ; I curse you and the fruits of your hands shall be smitten with mildew, your children shall sicken and die, your cattle shall waste away, and I pray God to root you out from the society of the saints. To observe such conduct as many lawyers are guilty of, stirring up strife among peaceable men, is an outrage upon the feelings of every honest, law-abiding man. To sit among them is like sitting in the depths of hell, for they are as corrupt as the bowels of hell, and their hands are as black as the ace of spades. I have known them for years; I know where they were begotten and by whom, and how they were brought forth, and the history of their lives."

"I say may God Almighty curse them from this time henceforth and let all the saints in the house say Amen. (a unanimous Amen from 3,000 persons resounded through the house) for they are a sink in the nostrils of God and Angels, and in the nostrils of every Latter Day Saint in this Territory."

"We have been driven from the face of man into this wilderness, and now the poor devils follow us to stir up strife, and to produce the spawn of hell in which they delight to live and upon which they feed."

"Keep away from court houses; no decent man will go there unless he goes as a witness, or is in some manner compelled to."

"Were it not for your ignorance, there would be a severing between the righteous and the wicked. I would not endure what I am obliged to endure, whether I am righteous or not, I would make a scattering among this people and make the wicked leave forthwith."

"When they want you to sit on a jury, tell them to judge the case themselves, and you keep away and mind your own business. Let me ask you, is there a man obliged to go into court, and sit on a jury? No. Our law will not oblige him to do it, only on certain conditions."

"I counsel you to keep away from courts, we have got the names of those who attend that courtroom, and we will send those characters on long missions, for we want to get rid of them."

I have given the foregoing quotations from a famous discourse of Brigham Young thus far, in order that the connection might be complete between the main discourse and those particular sentences which I am desirous should be more especially noticed. The author of them here appears in his native character and exposes the idiosyncrasies of his illiberal and profane mind with the native ferocity of his bold and impetuous nature. Couched on his lair, surrounded by the jackals famed as the lion's providers, feared by the other beasts of the forest who help to form the fierce element in which he delights to dwell, "the lion roars and the lesser beasts of the forest tremble."

STARVED TO DEATH BY REBELS.—Geo. C. Butler, son of L. G. Butler, of Sutter township, Sacramento county, died at Fort Sumter July 29th, 1864. His age was twenty years and seven months. He was Sergeant of the second Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, and was stationed at Plymouth, N. C., where he was captured, April 8th, 1864, by the rebels and taken, with twenty-one others, to the Slaughter Pen at Andersonville, Georgia. Thence they were sent to Fort Sumter, where the only one left alive to tell the tale of misery was saved from a lingering death and returned to his home at Worcester, Mass. From the 8th of April to July 29th, 1864, their rations were only one pint of corn meal and cobs, with no facilities of cooking. A sister of the deceased, writing from Worcester to her father here, says that he was one of twenty-one Worcester boys who went into the service together, and, as mentioned, only one returned from it alive. This only one of some twenty thousand cases of starvation of Union Soldiers, the lady writes, and she feels indignant, that more energetic measures have not been taken by the Government to secure an exchange, under the circumstances, or better treatment of our gallant boys by wholesale retaliation. It would seem from experience that the latter is the only argument that has any weight with the rebel fiends of the South, and they should be treated to it often and persistently. The blood runs cold when such atrocities as we have referred to are heard of, and the law of compensation could be rigidly dispensed in justice to our suffering soldiers as well as to the monsters who have originated this barbarity.—Ex.

SHOULD LOYAL REFUGEES BE DRAFTED?—The Washington Chronicle thus answers this question:

This inquiry has frequently been propounded to us. We have sought to ascertain the views of those in authority upon this question, and will give the numerous class especially interested the understanding of them which we have: Those persons who have never intended and do not now contemplate making their present residence their permanent home, but have always proposed and now expect to return to the States of their residence before the rebellion, or before they left on account of their Union sentiments, are not regarded as subjects for draft. Those who have now decided upon a permanent residence where now located, or away from the confines now covered by the rebellion, are subjects of draft; but, if drafted, will not be sent to fight the rebels, but be assigned to the Army of the Northwest, or other forces within loyal territory.

GONE TO SEED.—When Foot arrived within the Union lines, he was a perfect picture of physical and financial desolation. He had on three coats and two vests, all of them worn and threadbare, and an old soldier cap with the band behind his ears. His hair and whiskers were long, grey and wiry, and his general appearance betokened extreme penury and hard usage. He looked like the returned prodigal in search of husks, but the fatted calf was not killed in celebration of his repentance.

EUROPEAN ITEMS.—The latest European advices received by the steamer, reach to 8th of Jan. We glean the following items from a New York summary of news:

Frankfort advices say that the newly advertised United States loan had made speculators timid, although Frankfort prices remained 1/2 beyond those of N. York. It is estimated that about $285,000,000 in U. S. bonds had been sent, altogether to Europe.

The north German Lloyds' and Hamburg American Companies are each building a new steamer in England with a view to the maintenance of a regular weekly line between New York, Southampton, etc.

Another evidence of Queen Victoria's resumption of public functions is the fact that she has commanded all the ships of war to recommence firing salutes when passing Osborne during her stay there.

It is announced that Sir W. Mansfield is now Commander-in-Chief in India, vice Sir Hugh Rose, who will probably get command of the forces in Ireland.

"SOLOMON, I fear you are forgetting me," said a bright-eyed girl to her lover.

"Yes, Sue," said slow Sol, excusing himself, "I have been for getting you these two years."

Local Matters.

The promoters of the Sabbath Schools at Camp Douglas and G. S. L. City, tender their grateful and profound thanks to friends in California, for their timely supply of papers and reward-books, and feel specially grateful to Mrs. S. E. Boyce, of Grass Valley, Mrs. C. S. Rouner, of Cold Springs, Jas. Woodworth and Mr. Lathrop of San Francisco. Others have sent donations, but as no letter accompanied the parcels, the names of the givers cannot be identified. The following from the pen of one of these donors fully illustrates the interest and feeling existing among the friends of this Christian Institution of California: "It adds great interest to this matter to know that our soldiers, our brave boys, are working not only for the 'Union,' but also for 'Jesus.' God save our Union and bless our soldiers."

LUKE OSTERHOUT, formerly a soldier in Gen. Connor's command, and recently mustered out of the service, has purchased a one-half interest in the "Gem Saloon." S. L. City, at which place he will be most happy at all times to meet his old comrades and the public generally. The bar of the "Gem" is furnished with all the appurtenances requisite to make it in every sense of the word a first class saloon. The choicest wines, liquors and cigars are kept at this saloon and none other. A bar tender presides over the mixtures who fully knows his "biz" and can at any time make you enjoy a good drink, be it plain, straight, cocktail, julep or punch. Osterhout was always a favorite among his comrades and should not be neglected now. Go and see him.

New and extensive diggings have been struck about ninety miles from Virginia City, Montana, which bid fair to eclipse all the former gold fields that have been, as yet, discovered northward. So says a private letter received by Monday's mail. Wake up ye prospectors, there's luck in store for you.

TOMMY BRIGGS gives a ball at the Camp Theater on Monday evening next. As the proceeds of this dance are for Tommy's benefit and as he is anxious to emigrate, we trust the dancing community will all patronize him.

NOTICE.—A letter addressed to "David Putney" is left at the Adjutants' office of this Post, and will be delivered, when called for by him in person.

A train of eight wagons, the first of the season, started from S. L. City yesterday, for Virginia City, Montana.
